

Home, for now.

Make it yours. Take it with you.

IKEA's next generation of customers don't own their homes, and won't for years.

Renting is the default life stage, not a short gap before buying.

Low

Renters delay furnishing: "why invest in a flat I'll leave?" (hypothesis to validate in research)

Meet Lena. 26, Berlin, third flat in five years.

What she says

"I'll make it nice when I have a proper place."

What she does

Saves homes on Pinterest. Lives with a mattress on the floor. Sells nothing when she moves, leaves it on the street.

Her three blockers

- 1 · The landlord: no drilling, deposit at risk
- 2 · The move: "it won't fit the next flat"
- 3 · The money: furniture feels like sunk cost

Each blocker gets a pillar.

THE INSIGHT

"For now" lasts years.
So renters live like guests in their own homes.

They postpone "real" furniture to a future that keeps moving. The result: IKEA's biggest growth audience buys the least.

THE IDEA

Home, for now.

Stop treating renting as waiting. IKEA becomes the brand that makes a temporary home feel permanent, and helps it move with you.

Democratic design, for renters

Life at home, as it really is
